The invention set forth in claim 1 is not novel over documents 1 and 2, cited in the international search report.

The monocrystalline materials disclosed in documents 1 and 2 are "heat-treated at a high temperature of at least half of the melting point in absolute temperature" and, therefore, have dislocations arranged in a straight line.

Claims 2-4

The inventions set forth in claims 2-4 involve an inventive step relative to documents 1 and 2 cited in the international search report.

Documents 1 and 2 do not mention a device, and this feature could not be deduced easily by a person skilled in the art from the monocrystalline materials disclosed in documents 1 and 2, having dislocations arranged in a straight line.

Claim 5

The invention set forth in claim 5 is not novel over documents 1 and 2, cited in the international search report.

Documents 1 and 2 disclose methods for producing monocrystalline material having dislocations arranged in a straight line, since they include "heat-treatment at a high temperature of at least half of the melting point in absolute temperature".

Claims 6 and 7

The inventions set forth in claims 6 and 7 involve an inventive step relative to documents 1 and 2 cited in the international search report.

Documents 1 and 2 do not mention a device, and this feature could not be deduced easily by a person skilled in the art from the methods disclosed in documents 1 and 2 for producing monocrystalline material having dislocations arranged in a straight line.
